DIAL-OUT FEATURES

Dropping out of room analogy, Dial-Out conference calls are an easier concept to grasp. The host of the conference call essentially calls out to multiple people at the same time from one device. As soon as people answer, they're on the conference call. It's just like using your phone normally, except several people will be on the receiving end instead of just one.

DIAL-IN FEATURE

Imagine your conference call as a room with a PIN code lock on the door. The room itself represents your 'conference bridge', this is just a fancy name for your conference call platform. At the scheduled time, all your conference call guests will use their unique PIN codes to unlock the door and enter the room. Typically the host of the meeting will already be on the line, or in our fictitious scenario, they're already sitting in this room as the guests enter.
